CALIFORNIA & ALIENS.

BIG PROBLEM FOR JAPAN.

Reuter's
[Service to the "Telegraph."]
London, April 17.

Reuter's correspondent at Washington states that Mr. Bryan, Secretary of State, and President Wilson have conferred regarding the developments in the Californian Legislature.

It appears that the Alien Landowning Bill is deemed more difficult than the original measure for Japan to oppose successfully because it closely follows the lines of the Alien Ownership Law which during the past decade has been strictly enforced in the territories of the United States without objection by any foreign Government.

It is considered in American political circles that to lodge an objection to the measure it will be necessary for Japan to extend to Americans resident in Japan the right to acquire property in fee simple.

May Affect Investments.

Reuter's correspondent at Sacramento wires that scores of letters and telegrams have been received protesting against the Alien Land Bill on the grounds that the measure will be inimical to the present and future investments of London, Berlin and Paris banking syndicates in California.

The Bill as passed by the Assembly permits Corporations controlled by persons eligible for citizenship to own property, but the Senate Bill classes all foreign Syndicates and Corporations as aliens, their property to be subject to escheatment to the State after a term of years.

The both Houses have to meet in conference to settle the question of amending the Bill.

Another Bill.
The Assembly has passed another Bill, aimed at the Japanese, requiring the market fishermen of any race ineligible for citizenship to pay an annual tax of $100 (gold), while other aliens are liable to a tax of $20.

He started the shipbuilding firm of Harland and Wolff in 1860 and retired therefrom in 1898. From 1892 to 1910 he was Conservative M. P. for East Belfast.]

THE SUCHARD.

STILL AT LAS PALMAS.

London, April 17.
Reuter's correspondent at Las Palmas states that the German airship Suchard, with which it is proposed to make a flight to the West Indies, was completely inflated last night, and the final preparations were made when an escape of gas by the chief valve deflated the envelope.

Herr Bluecker was extremely annoyed and telegraphed to Germany for the immediate despatch of a further supply of hydrogen.

Reuter's
[Service to the "Telegraph."]
London, April 17.

A message from Constantinople states that while an armistice has not been concluded, the suspension of hostilities has been mutually agreed upon by the Turks and Bulgarians.

Later.
Reuter's correspondent at Sofia wires that the suspension of hostilities between Turkey and Bulgaria is merely a verbal agreement for the purpose of allowing both sides to bury their dead.

A Diplomatic Fiction.

Later.
"Burying the dead" is a diplomatic fiction for the purpose of explaining that Bulgaria is agreeing to a truce with the Turks apart from the other Allies.

In the House of Commons on Wednesday Mr. J. King, Liberal M.P. for N. Somerset, alluding to a passage in the last report of Mr. Begg, consulting architect, regarding the increasing number of Chinese workmen employed on Indian buildings and operations, asked Mr. Montagu, Under Secretary of State for India, whether he would undertake that Chinese labour would not be employed in the construction of the new capital at Delhi.

Mr. Montagu said Lord Crewe had seen the passage and sympathized with Mr. King's apprehension. He would bring the matter to the notice of the Government of India.

ARMY DEBATE.

GOVERNMENT CRITICISED.

Reuter's
[Service to the "Telegraph."]
London, April 17.

On the motion for the second reading of the Army Annual Bill in the House of Lords Lord, Lovat said those interested in the defence of the country viewed with growing anxiety the Government's attitude to defence at home and abroad.

Lord St. Audries expatiated on the dangers if it should be necessary to send an expeditionary force to the Continent, Egypt or India.

Government Reply.

The Earl of Crewe said the question was whether the reduction of the margin of safety aimed at in the original fixing of the Territorial Force had been so reduced as to require an immediate and heroic remedy. He declared that the situation, though grave, was not serious enough for a heroic remedy, but it was clear we must maintain a considerable margin over the minimum regarded as necessary for the security of the country.

It was also clear that the military authorities must carefully consider the present conditions and prospects of the Territorials and see what steps can still be taken on a voluntary basis in order properly to maintain the margin.

He thought the country would be content to wait till Colonel Seely and his advisers made their proposals in regard to the improvement and enlargement of the Territorials before embarking on an altogether unknown sea.

Lord Lansdowne alluded to the somewhat perplexing character of Ministerial utterances and asked what the Government was going to do. He had listened carefully, but he was unable to gather that anything particular was likely to happen.

Lord Hershell said the Government felt there was no cause for panic or alarm, but they would not shrink from any step necessary for national safety.

Man Who was Found in the Train.

Before Mr. Hazeland, at the Police Court, this morning, Inspector Kerr charged the Chinese who was found in the train on the Kowloon-Canton Railway in possession of a revolver, with not having a licence for the same.

Inspector Kerr:—He will not give any account of why he was on the train with a loaded revolver.

His Worship:—(To the Interpreter) What was he doing with this loaded revolver?

Defendant:—I was taking it on board a steamer.

Inspector Kerr:—He possessed only a revolver and five rounds of ammunition in it. He had got no money and said he came from Canton. He gave us an address of people in Canton who would vouch for his respectability. We have written, but there was no reply.

A fine of $250 or in default three months was imposed.

Indian Railway Strike.

The railway strike in Madras has, it is understood, furnished an opportunity to railway men on the Eastern side of India to investigate their grievances. It is stated that a meeting of railway servants will shortly be called in Calcutta with the object of discussing in detail railway working in general with some of the senior railway servants. The result of these deliberations may lead to deputations being sent to the heads of all the principal railways in India.

CONFIRMATION OF PRINCESS MARY.

Quiet Service in the Chapel Royal.

Princess Mary, the only daughter of the King and Queen, has been confirmed by the Archbishop of Canterbury in the private chapel at Buckingham Palace. For the occasion there was a special service in place of the ordinary ten o'clock service. There was no general invitation, but the ceremony was open to all the officers and servants of the Royal Household.

Those present included the Prince of Wales, Queen Alexandra, and Princess Victoria, attended by the Countess of Gosford, Miss Violet Vivian, Earl Howe, General Sir Dighton Probyn, V.O., Colonel Sir Arthur Davidson, and the Hon. Charlotte Knollys, Princess Christian, accompanied by the Duke and Duchess of Teck, the Duchess of Albany, and Princess Alexander of Teck, the Princess Royal, with her daughter, the Duchess of Fife, and Princess Maud, and Admiral Prince Louis of Battenberg, with Princess Louise, and their daughter Princess Louise.

Few Outside Guests.
Practically the only guests from the outside were the Earl of Rosebery, Lord Farquhar, and Madam Bricks (former governess to the Princess).

Others present were the suite on duty and the household staff and servants.
The Primate was assisted by Canon Edgar Sheppard (Sub-Dean of the Chapels Royal and Domestic Chaplain to their Majesties), and the choir of the Chapel Royal, St. James's, performed the musical portions of the service.

Princess Mary was charmingly dressed in a simple white gown and wearing a veil, the veil worn by the Queen at her own confirmation. She sat slightly in front of her parents, who occupied the front seats nearest the clergy.

Jesus calls us o'er the tumult
Of our life's wild, restless sea;
Day by day His sweet voice
Sounding, saying, "Christian, follow me."
This was the preliminary to the "Order of Confirmation, or laying on of hands upon those that are baptised and come to year of discretion."

"I Do."
The Archbishop read the preface, and when he asked the candidate, "Do you here, in the presence of God and this congregation, renew the solemn promise and vow that was made in your name at your baptism?" she answered audibly and clearly, "I do."

Short verses followed, and then the choir sang the favourite Confirmation hymn, "O Jesus, I have promised to serve Thee to the end."

After the prayer Princess Mary advanced and knelt before the Primate, who, laying his hand lightly upon her head, spoke the well-known supplication.
Fight the Good Fight.

After the Collect the choir sang the final hymn, "Fight the good fight with all thy might," and the Benediction concluded the brief service.

A good deal of public interest was manifested, and large crowds watched the arrival and departure of the various members of the Royal Family.

THE NANCY INCIDENT.

GERMAN INDIGNATION.

Reuter's
[Service to the "Telegraph."]
London, April 17.

A message from Berlin states that the papers give columns of indignant comment to the Nancy affair, in which a number of excited students discourteously treated a party of Germans, and are publishing stories of ill-treatment of Germans in the Riviera and elsewhere. The incident has aroused the sharpest anti-French outburst for years, even exceeding the feeling at the Agadir crisis.

British Opinion.

Later.
The Nancy incident is the sensation of the moment. All the British papers publish lengthy editorials, pointing out that the extraordinary feeling excited in Germany shows that tension exists there as well as in France. They express the opinion that Herr von Jagow's remarks on French Chauvinism, without waiting for an explanation, was probably due to the anxiety of the Government to pass the unpopular army taxation. They hope that the promptitude and good feeling with which the French Government acted will lead to an early subsidence of the "storm in a teacup."

South China Morning Post.

The British Commons, nowadays particularly, is a great leveler of men. It resents the man who affects a grandiose manner. Super-elegance bores it to tears or hilarity. Under its withering contempt the prig has no chance. If members wish to create a good impression they must effectively conceal any trace of intellectual superiority. Even if they are known to possess such an attribute the House will not have it aired. The Oxford manner is fast dying out in the mother of Parliaments and there are few who regret it. Nevertheless one cannot be wholly unmoved by the oft-repeated degrading spectacle of the House losing control of itself. There is, as we declared some weeks ago in discussing the subject, no excuse for impassioned and poisoned language in debate. The elected leaders of the people should ever strive to set an example of conduct to the constituents they represent.

Daily Press.

German Trade in China. That no great need exists for urging upon the German Government, as Prince Loewenstein has done in the Reichstag this week, the advisability of exercising a "cultural and commercial influence" in China is made abundantly manifest by a review of the steadily improving commercial position of Germany in this part of the world. It shows that the Government and German commercial circles are alive to all their opportunities. The most salient fact about German enterprise in China is the success with which it is developing Kiao-chow. The trade of the port has been increased from under ten and a half million Haikwan Taels in 1902 to close on forty-seven millions in 1911. One of the main causes of Germany's success has been her clear perception of the fact that the Pachtgebiet could be made to pay only if trade with the Hinterland were rendered as free as possible. It was to this end that she invited the Chinese Government to open the Custom House at Tsingtao, the capital of the Pachtgebiet, thus avoiding the innumerable delays and inconveniences that would have accompanied the establishment of a Custom House on the frontier. Results attained between 1902 and 1905 justified the step and led to another. By a Customs convention concluded on December 1, 1905, she arranged with China to limit the free trade area, which had hitherto comprised the whole of the Pachtgebiet, to what is known as the Great Harbour, her object being to free the Tsingtao-Tsinanfu Railway from Customs control.

Reconstitution of the House of Lords.

Broadly speaking, the scope of the Government plan is stated to be as follows. The new Second Chamber is to consist of something between 150 and 200 persons, nearly all of whom will be directly elected by large constituencies based on the ordinary Parliamentary register. There will be no special qualification; the choice of candidates will be as unrestricted as it is for the House of Commons. Elected candidates will be styled "Lords of Parliament," and (this is important) "will be entitled to wear robes suitably appointed." In order that labour members may enjoy the glory of the these suitably appointed robes, it is "at least very possible" that the Lords of Parliament will be paid a salary sufficient to enable them to bear their blushing honours with true baronial dignity. But "it may be that Labour, being committed to Single Chamber Government, will take no part in providing candidates for the Second Chamber." That is an agonising uncertainty. Still, we imagine there is really no great occasion to fear that the nation will lose the high privilege of beholding a Labour lord or two on the crimson benches.

Additional evidence having been heard in the Ipoh Post Office case, in which a clerk named David is charged with criminal breach of trust in respect of $25,000, which mysteriously disappeared from a postal bag forwarded from Ipoh to Penang, the accused was committed for trial at the Assizes.

Typhoid in Penang.

There is at present a good deal of typhoid fever among the Chinese in Penang, says the "Straits Times." Nearly all the cases are confined to children and young people, and it is asserted by a medical man that, in a great many instances, the disease can be traced to the consumption of ice-cream sold by the itinerant vendors who frequent the vicinity of the local schools.

Coolies and Pensions.

Now that the question of pensions for assistant planters in Sumatra has been successfully disposed of, the various planting bodies are turning their attention to schemes for pensioning coolies. The first company to make public their deliberations on the subject is the Amsterdam Deli Company, which intends to pension off all coolies who have 15 years' service to their credit with 3 guilders 60 cents per month, and those with 20 and more years of service with 4 guilders 80 cents per month. The Senembah Maatschappij are also deliberating on the matter.

A Political Play from the Inside.

A political play entitled "The Bill" will be produced by Mr. Wareing's repertory company at Glasgow at the end of this month. It is understood that the authoress is Mrs. George Cornwallis West. Much criticism has appeared in the papers about Mr. Stanley Houghton's presentation of political life in its higher ranges in his play "Trust the People." It will be interesting to see how politicians are portrayed in their intimate life by one who was the wife of one Cabinet Minister and is the mother of another. Mrs. Cornwallis West's last play was "His Borrowed Plumes," produced in 1909 at the Criterion.

Jumped Overboard.

News has been received from Suez that the P. and O. Syria, which left Colombo on February 28, lost a passenger in the Red Sea. It was a young man from Madras who joined the ship at Colombo, and who complained, on the voyage, of having caught "a touch of the sun." He had lost his situation in Madras and was depressed about it. On March 10, he jumped overboard, just as the rest of the passengers were sitting down to tiffin. The engines were stopped, and the ship circled about the neighbourhood for more than an hour, but nothing more was seen of the man.

Singapore Mortality Returns.

The mortality returns for Singapore issued by the Registrar of Births and Deaths show that, during the week ending April 5, there were 207 deaths (150 males, 57 females), giving a ratio per mille of population of 33.53, this including 15 deaths at St. John's Island. Without these 15 deaths, the ratio would be 31.10. Malarial fever accounted for 22 deaths, phthisis 21, convulsions 24, beri beri 23, bronchitis 5, dysentery 13, pneumonia 17. Twenty-two children under three months of age died. The nationalities were represented as follows: Europeans 21, Eurasians 2, Chinese 158, Malays 20, Indians 16.

Wireless in the Philippines.

One month from the date of completion, the wireless station of the bureau of posts erected at San Jose, Mindoro, got into communication with the Zamboanga wireless. The distance covered by this wireless is over 360 miles. The San Jose wireless station is not used for wireless communication with Zamboanga, as there is communication with the Cuyo wireless station, which is only 180 miles from Zamboanga station, but is used for communication to and from Mindoro. The plant is a 3y K.W. and is the seventh wireless station to be erected by the bureau. The other stations are at Zamboanga, Jolo, Malabang, Cuyo, Puerto Princesa, and Davao. It is understood that the next plant erected will be a very large one for Manila.

SERVICE MATTERS.

Major General Perrott.

Major Gen. T. Perrott, commanding the Royal Artillery at Gibraltar, will retire on May 6 on reaching the age of 62. It is understood on good authority that he will be succeeded by Brigadier Gen. J. T. Johnston, late Royal Artillery, who for the past year has been in command of the Scottish Coast Defences. Major Gen. Perrott was the immediate predecessor of Major Gen. Stephenson in the Straits Command.

Recruiting for the Army.

In his report for the twelve months to September 30 last, Brigadier-General F. R. O. Carleton, director of recruiting, states that although there was a slight increase in the number of men enlisted for both the regular army and the special reserve, the results as a whole cannot be regarded as satisfactory. More recruits could have been accepted, had they been forthcoming, especially in the special reserve. The continued prosperity of trade and activity, both in emigration and in recruiting additional personnel for the navy, undoubtedly had an adverse effect, and although some improvement was apparent in the numbers coming forward during the earlier months of the period under review, it was not maintained throughout the year. The actual numbers enlisted were, for the regular army 30,316, an increase of 864 as compared with the previous twelve months, and for the special reserve 21,391, an increase of 775. With the exception of the infantry of the line and sappers of the Royal Engineers, no difficulty was experienced in obtaining a sufficient number of recruits. Owing to the comparatively small number leaving the colours the shortage of recruits for the infantry has not yet produced any considerable effect, but it is stated that the situation promises to become serious before long, unless a considerable improvement takes place.

An Adventurous Career.

Lieut. Frederick Lennox Langdale, R.N., (retired) who died recently at his residence at Strawberry-hill, Middlesex, after a short illness, entered the navy as cadet in 1865 when twelve years old, and few men have had a more adventurous career both in the service and after retirement. He first served in the frigate Terrible in the Mediterranean and on the north coast of Spain, during the Carlist War, and then went round the world in the corvette Cossack. He was engaged in putting down the slave trade on the East Coast of Africa, piracy in Malaysia, and "blackbirding" in Polynesia. He then served in the ironclads Resistance and Sultan in the Channel Fleet, and in the corvette Sapphire on the Australian station. He received the Royal Humane Society's medal and clasp for jumping overboard to save life in the Bay of Biscay and on the coast of New Zealand. He retired from the navy in 1877, and bought and cultivated an island in the Fiji group. In 1890, during the Civil War in Chili, he accepted a commission as captain of a corvette in the Chilean navy, surrendered the ship on the death of Balmaceda, and was sentenced to be shot by the Congressionists. He returned to Fiji in 1891, and was appointed a member of Legislative Council there, and, later, commissioner and magistrate. In 1909 he took charge of an exploring expedition to the Solomon Islands, during which several unknown rivers and islands were discovered and named. On the voyage from Sydney, the 90-ton steamer, Rob Roy, in which were the members of the expedition, broke her tail shaft and drifted seven hundred miles across the Coral Sea, narrowly escaping shipwreck on the Melish Reef. In 1905 he went on a second expedition to the Solomons, New Guinea, and the Malacca Straits. He returned to England to settle down in 1909, but, a year later, started off on yet another exploring expedition on the Upper Congo, in Africa, where he remained six months. During his residence in Strawberry-hill he wrote a stirring story of adventure, entitled "Marooned in the South Seas," copies of which have just been accepted by H.M. the King for his sons.—Exchange.

SHIP STABILITY.

There are good grounds for believing that the disappearance of certain ship at sea may be due to an unscientific division of watertight compartments while the public has all the time innocently believed the ship to be unsinkable because it had been amply provided with bulkheads. Speaking generally, a long watertight compartment in the centre of a vessel may become a source of danger if flooded and cause the ship to turn turtle. Thus it is calculated that if the "Titanic" had a compartment 282.4 feet long in its centre which by a damage to its side became filled with water the ship would roll over although she might continue theoretically safe against sinking in an upright position. Experienced modern shipbuilders on this account put in more bulkheads than required by regulation. Considerations that also affect stability are the proportion of length to depth and breadth. Stability diminishes with increasing length to draught and length to breadth ratios when compartments of equal length are flooded. Thus, as in the Goliath vessels of the present day the draught is practically fixed at 32.8 feet in order to suit available harbour depth, and therefore for increased accommodation only length and breadth can be increased, the problem of apportionment of bulkheads varies with each vessel and makes it necessary to make a careful investigation in each case. It appears a little strange that under the regulations that is not made compulsory; also that such regulations as have been framed take no account of longitudinal bulkheads, or of transverse stability. These two considerations are of the greatest importance in all large modern vessels with their restricted draught, and therefore it is essential to work out the effect in each design of the possible flooding of a large compartment amidships

HONGKONG, FRIDAY, APRIL 18, 1913.

INDIA AND IMPERIAL DEFENCE.

The loyalty and unity of the component parts of the British Empire have been amply evidenced in the recent past by the gifts and offers towards Imperial defence. Willingness to help has been displayed on all hands, from points so far apart as New Zealand and Canada. In the latter case it is true that there has been displayed, and is still apparent, a sharp conflict of opinion as to the precise form the contribution shall take, but it is only a difference in method. The Conservatives are all for a free and unconditional gift of battle-ships to the Imperial Navy proper; the Liberals favour the plan of creating a distinctive Canadian service, though, of course, they are quite prepared to agree that this branch of the Imperial Navy shall be placed at the disposal of the Empire at a time of crisis. There is absolute unity in the desire of both parties that Canada should do its part in common with the rest of the Empire.

When we turn to India, there are important factors to be taken into consideration which are apt to be overlooked by superficial observers. The Indian Empire, it must be remembered, is bearing a heavy burden of military expenditure at the present time, since the Army there costs India no less a sum than £20,000,000 a year. This is a staggering figure, and, as has been pointed out by the Calcutta correspondent of one of the leading Home papers, if the contributions of Australia, South Africa and Canada to Imperial defence are to be taken as a criterion, the sacrifices made by the Indian people completely dwarf those of the Colonies. It has been asserted that the cost of the Indian Army is £20,000,000 out of a revenue of £81,000,000. Even admitting that these figures were accurate, there is no self-governing Colony in the Empire which assigns a quarter of its revenue to naval and military expenditures. Parenthetically we may note that Hongkong pays 20 per cent. on its gross revenue. But it is misleading to cite the Indian revenue as £81,000,000. The net revenue, as now set forth in the Indian Budget, is only £53,500,000, so that the cost of the Army is nearer two-fifths than one-fourth. In view of these facts, there would seem to be good grounds for the view held in some quarters that to expect India to come forward with further help on behalf of the Empire would be to look for too much. India's burdens are already heavy enough; and in any case much money will have to be found in days ahead to supply many parts of the country with the boons of civilisation.

Of course, these are the point as to whether the Army in India could not be reduced and the money saved devoted to a purely naval contribution. But that is largely a matter for expert opinion. The fact, however, cannot be lost sight of that during the Boer War 10,000 British soldiers were drafted from India to South Africa, which shows that the Army in India is looked upon as a force which can be called upon to serve in any part of the Empire, and farther proves that at a critical period India was quite safe with 10,000 men less than the normal strength. The whole question is a weighty and complicated one, however; and we think enough has been said to demonstrate the fact that it is not lightly to be dismissed or to be settled without due consideration of the many points involved.

The Children's Bill.

Yesterday the Ordinance amending the "Offences against the Person Act of 1835" was passed by the Legislative Council; and, henceforth, any person over sixteen years of age, who has custody of a child, and ill-treats it in any way or permits it to be ill-treated, will be guilty of a heavily punishable misdemeanour. All honour to those who framed the Act and made it law; but—why has Hongkong allowed forty-eight years to pass before discovering officially that the life of its Chinese children was not altogether a bed of roses? That is one of the many puzzles connected with the Colony which we have given up trying to unravel. But there's no good in raking up old grievances; it remains to be seen how the Act will work. When the good tidings is spread Cantonwards, it is highly probable that some of the humane beings who are daily bringing their own, or other people's, malformed children here, with a view to commercial advantage, may be disposed to hesitate.

Interesting Questions.

Sir Kai Ho Kai, we notice, put in one or two shrewd questions on the subject of the Act's provisions and scope. The Government, he said, ought surely to have some Poor Law Act, or else some institution that would take care of the children. What was the good of a law if they had no means of relieving the sufferings of those concerned? Much the same question was asked in the "Telegraph" a few days ago, in a special article. Without any doubt, there should be a greater number of recognized refuges for deserted or ill-treated children. But, in all countries, we would remind Sir Kai Ho Kai that such a matter is, vulgarly speaking, "up to" the Chinese themselves, rather than to the Britishers or the Government. If the money which they are continually giving to the noisy vagrants who wander about the streets of the Colony were devoted to one central fund, there would soon be sufficient to provide for more than half the neglected children in the place.

Doctors' Profits.

It is difficult to decide what was the truth underlying the recent controversy with the doctors in connection with the Insurance Act. One argument which was used was that the sale value of practices would be greatly depreciated, yet it does not seem to have worked out so in actual fact in every case. Advertisements in recent issues of the "Lancet" point to the fact that already the panel practice is advanced as an inducement to purchase, or pay enhanced premiums for partnerships. In any number of cases such expressions as the following appear:—"It is estimated that the Insurance Act will immediately add from £400 to £500 a year to the receipts of the practice." Probably the truth lies somewhere between the statement that the Act will ruin practices and that it will greatly enhance their value. Doctors and practices vary; so do doctors, for that matter; and while some doctors almost thirst for the blood of the Chancellor of the Exchequer, others feel a sense of gratitude towards him. But these advertisements notwithstanding, there is a deal more grumbling than praise. And no statue of Mr. Lloyd George has yet been erected.

£10,000 FOR A HOSPITAL

At the annual meeting of the governors, donors, and subscribers of the London Homoeopathic Hospital, it was announced that a lady, who wished to remain anonymous, had sent a cheque for £10,000, £9,000 towards the debt to the bankers, amounting to £16,675, and £1,000 for a bed to benefit gentlewomen of small means in the free wards.

Lord Dysart has promised to give the last £1,000 if the whole sum of £16,675 due to the bankers is raised by Dec. 31 next. To endeavour to raise this sum and celebrate the jubilee of her Majesty's landing in England, the Board have decided to name the ward for children in the new wing the "Queen Alexandra Commemorative Ward." If the whole sum of £16,675 is forthcoming by Dec. 31, 1913.

Gamblers.

Nine Chinese were charged at the Police Court, this morning with gambling at West Point. The first defendant was fined $50, or in default one month, and the remainder were each fined $3, or in default seven days. Sixteen others were fined $3 each for similar offence at West Point.

Jockey Club Meeting.

Attention is drawn to an advertisement reminding owners and members interested in subscription griffins that at the half-yearly meeting of the Jockey Club to be held to-morrow, certain proposals will be brought forward with regard to the programme for the next Race Meeting.

A Deserving Cause.

An appeal is made to-day, in our advertising columns, by the Superioresse of the Italian Convent for the usual gifts of out-of-garments and worn-out clothes to the Convent. The change of season calls for a change of garments for the children, and, as there has been a falling-off in gifts of late, the appeal, it is to be hoped, will meet with a ready response.

CUTTING PINE TREES.

At the Police Court, this morning, two Chinese were charged, before Mr. Hazeland, with being in unlawful possession of a number of young pine trees cut from a Government plantation.

The defendants said they were given tickets to cut the trees by another Chinese, who was recently sentenced to six months' hard labour for selling false permissions to cut trees on Government plantations.

The convicted man was brought from prison and he denied having given the defendants any tickets.

One of the defendants was discharged whilst the other was sentenced to two months' hard labour and four hours' stocks.

FORGED CHEQUES.

German Bookkeeper Sentenced to Three Years Hard Labour.

At the Criminal Sessions this morning, before the Chief Justice, Sir W. Rees Davies, K. O., Wilhelm Aufmann, a native of Dusseldorf, appeared to stand his trial on charges of forging two cheques for $2,000 each, dated January 4 and 28, purporting to have been drawn by Messrs. Arnold Karberg and Company, on the Hongkong and Shanghai Banking Corporation, and made payable to Kwai Sang, or bearer, with intent to defraud.

Originally there were other charges preferred against the prisoner, but these were not proceeded with.

The Attorney General, the Hon. Mr. J. A. S. Bucknill, prosecuted on behalf of the Crown, while prisoner was represented by Mr. E. H. Sharp, K.C., instructed by Mr. M. R. Harris, of Messrs. Wilkinson and Grist.

Pleaded Guilty.

In answer to the charges, prisoner pleaded guilty on both counts.

The Attorney General pointed out that it was on the first and third counts of the indictment that the prisoner had pleaded.

His Lordship—Do you wish to proceed on the other counts?

The Attorney General—If your Lordship please, I will withdraw the other charges.

His Lordship—Which counts do you wish to withdraw?

The Attorney General—All except the first and third.

The Attorney General, in outlining the case, said the circumstances were extremely simple; they were those circumstances with which in all countries and in all Courts one was more or less familiar. The prisoner was a man who was in very trusted employment; he was book-keeper to a well-known firm here, Messrs. Arnold, Karberg and Co., and as such he was in a trusted and confidential position, and in the course of his duties he had to fill up cheques and cheque books and generally deal as book-keeper and accountant to the firm.

Anxious to Acquire Money.

Well, for reasons which would do no good, even if proper, to dilate upon, the prisoner seemed to have lost control of his better moral character, and although he came to the Colony with excellent recommendations for trustworthiness and propriety of conduct, after he had been here not a very long time—because he only arrived about 1911—he appeared to have contracted debts which he was unable to meet, or at any rate he seemed to have been anxious to acquire more money than he had. And as a result of this he seemed to have forged cheques in a somewhat ingenious fashion, the method of which, if his Lordship wished, he (the Attorney General) could explain in a few words. The forgery, of course, was admitted, and perhaps it was not necessary for him to go into details of how the forgeries were effected and how they were covered up. It was sufficient to say that the sum involved in the two charges was a sum of $4,000; and that the accused went away to Manila where he was captured. In accused's favour it must be said that he at once returned to Hongkong and waived any question of extradition proceedings.

An Imaginary Person.

His Lordship—There were no extradition proceedings?

The Attorney General—He waived them. Proceeding, the Attorney General said the accused was represented by Mr. Sharp, and he understood that Mr. Sharp desired to address his Lordship on the prisoner's behalf.

His Lordship—I see the cheques in both counts are made payable to one Kwai Sang; who is he?

The Attorney General—I think there is no such person.

His Lordship—An imaginary person?

The Attorney General—An imaginary person.

His Lordship—What was the total loss?

The Attorney General—The total loss on these two counts is $4,000.

His Lordship—The cheques were presented and honoured?

The Attorney General—The cheques were presented and paid.

There probably is a person named

Kwai Sang, but if there is he is not known to us. They are forged cheques. It is one of those cases with which one is quite familiar; a clerk in a confidential position has betrayed his trust.

Excellent Character Hit-to.

Mr. Sharp said that the defendant had pleaded guilty, and he was not there, in any sense, to defend him; but he had to say how profoundly the defendant regretted what he had done, and to put before his Lordship certain circumstances which he respectfully submitted he might fairly weigh in the balance, in the defendant's favour. The Attorney General had alluded to some of those circumstances himself. As His Lordship would see from the depositions, and as he thought, the Attorney General had himself put it, the defendant had hitherto borne an excellent character with his employers, both here and at home. He came to the Colony a year and a half ago with high recommendations and testimonials, and he had conducted himself well, apart from this matter. He had conducted himself well while in the firm's employ, and he did not think he need refer his Lordship to the passage he would find on the depositions. He was highly recommended. He was entrusted with the bank book, and cheque book. He was a highly trusted clerk.

Intended to Refund.

Therefore the defendant's antecedents were, as his Lordship could see, good and his previous character had been good. He was not a hardened criminal; very far indeed from it, but as the Attorney General had put it to his Lordship, the expenses and temptations of the East were apparently too much for him and he got into financial difficulties. He attempted to extricate himself in the wrong way, intending to, as he had said, refund to his employers any money which he thus improperly took from them. Such a course was, as they all knew, frequently followed and the money was refunded without disastrous consequences. Another point which he thought he might properly weigh in the defendant's favour was that it appeared from the depositions that he had not put the usual obstacles in the way of the prosecution and he had made what partial restitution he could.

His Lordship—In the way of money?

Counsel—All money which was in his possession he has handed over to Messrs. Arnold Karberg. He was in Manila when the defalcations were discovered and he waived extradition proceedings and came back to Hongkong and handed over to Messrs. Arnold Karberg all the money which he had in his possession amounting to three thousand dollars.

His Lordship—That is to say he has refunded three thousand out of four thousand?

Counsel—Yes, he has refunded a little more than three thousand.

Wife and Child in Europe.

Continuing Mr. Sharp and that telegrams had already passed between here and Germany and the defendant said that he intended to make restitution. He might have defended himself in the case but he had taken the more honourable course and pleaded guilty and made such restitution as had been in his power. In passing he might also refer to the fact that he was instructed that the defendant had a wife and child in Europe and he had been, in fact, sending money to them for their support and they therefore would be the principal sufferers from any long term of imprisonment that his Lordship might pass. Whatever punishment his Lordship inflicted would mean ruin both professionally and socially to the defendant. The very fact that he was convicted necessarily involved this, and whatever term of imprisonment his Lordship might inflict would mean much greater punishment to the defendant than to the ordinary criminal. The defendant knew that he would be punished and he owned that he deserved it and left himself in his Lordship's hands, but he did ask that his Lordship would give weight—what weight he might—to the circumstances which had been laid before him—his previous good character, the manner in which he had facilitated the prosecution and made what restitution laid in his power.

His Lordship—Do his employers Messrs. Arnold Karberg endorse your appeal?

Mr. Sharp—They have given the evidence which I have read.

His Lordship—I want to know whether the employers are endorsing it?

Counsel—They have no objection to press for punishment.

His Lordship—If the prosecution themselves make a special appeal to the Court for mercy I should consider that.

Counsel—I feel a little embarrassed personally. There are civil proceedings pending and it might embarrass them.

His Lordship—If they are prepared to come forward in court and endorse your recommendation, I should naturally deal with it very differently.

Counsel—I understand that the partner is not present but Mr. Friederichs who is present says that in view of the civil proceedings he does not think that he ought to give evidence. But he did give evidence and it is true. The man had a good character and the firm does not wish to press for punishment.

His Lordship—I don't see that civil proceedings have anything to do with it. The man is taking his trial on a serious charge and I want them to say whether they endorse what has been said or not.

The Sentence.

Prisoner had nothing to say why sentence should not be passed.

His Lordship—Wilhelm Aufmann, you have pleaded guilty to two counts in the indictment which charges you with forgery of two specific sums of $2,000 with intent to defraud. The other counts in the indictment have not been proceeded with and therefore I will content myself with dealing entirely with these two counts to which you have pleaded guilty. It is a very sad thing to see a man of your education and position in the dock charged with a crime of this kind, and I must point out to you that forgery is a very serious offence in all nations and by the laws of England, by the laws of this colony, is subject to the severest possible sentences. I am desirous of showing every possible mercy I can to you. I recognise the fact that you have hitherto borne a good character as spoken to by one of your employers, and that you have done what you can to make good to your employers. I recognise that as an element in your favour and also that although you went to Manila presumably to avoid arrest, you were prepared to return here and take your trial. All those facts I have taken into consideration but I have also to take into consideration the interests of the community in which we live, and if I allow men in your position to go without severe punishment for an offence of this kind it might be an example to others to defraud their employers and so shake the commercial integrity which we are so proud of in Hongkong. The sentence which I could pass on you would be a heavy one indeed but I am prepared to do all I can to meet the appeal which has been made by learned counsel on your behalf and in some extent endorsed by your employers.

I should be wanting in my duty if I passed a less sentence than three years' imprisonment with hard labour on each count the sentences to run concurrently; that is three years in all.

BOY AND BICYCLE.

Police Court Sequel to a Ride.

At the Police Court, this morning, before Mr. O. D. McMahon, a boy named John Davis was charged with stealing a bicycle valued at $50, the property of Isaac Samuel Perry.

It was stated that the defendant took the bicycle from College Chambers, Wyndham Street.

The defendant said that he was given permission to take the machine to go out for a ride.

His Worship bound the defendant over under the First Offender's Act for six months.

SPECIAL CABLES.

MONGOLS v. CHINESE.
CHINESE FORCE ROUTED.

[Our Own Correspondent.]

Shanghai, April 18.

Chinese reports state that 2,000 Mongols during the night attacked and routed 700 Chinese to the north of Dolo Nar.

Each party claims that it was not the aggressor.

The Mongols assert that the Chinese lost 400 killed, besides guns, rifles and ammunition.

CRIMINAL SESSIONS.

Charge of Being Concerned in an Armed Robbery.

The April Criminal sessions were opened this morning by the Chief Justice, Sir W. Rees Davies K.C., when there was calendar of ten cases down for hearing.

The first case was that in which Lau Chi Ming was charged with being concerned in an armed robbery and with receiving stolen goods, well knowing them to have been stolen.

Prisoner pleaded not guilty.

The case for the crown was conducted by the Hon. Attorney General Mr. J. A. S. Bucknill, instructed by the Crown Solicitor Mr. P. M. Hodgson, while the defence was in the hands of Mr. F. C. Jenkin, instructed by Mr. Reader Harris, of Messrs. Wilk and Grist.

The jury was composed as follows:—Messrs P. E. F. Stone foreman, C. H. Buckingham, H. W. Pelly, A. Carnichael, B. H. Mehta, T. G. Weall and W. H. Kylling.

Two Charges.

The Attorney General said that the circumstances of the case were very simple. It was one of those armed robbery cases which were unfortunately rather frequent in the colony. There were two charges, one, that of armed robbery with violence, and the other with receiving stolen property well knowing it to have been stolen. On February 11 early in the morning a serious robbery took place at the house No. 1 Square Street in the city. The house was occupied by four women. The number of the robbers was not quite certain but, at any rate, there were two or three or possibly more. Two were actually caught red-handed on the place and those two had elected to give evidence. The evidence that they would give would be an account of the robbery and it would be supplemented by that of the women in the house who would tell them what took place when the robbers came. They would naturally ask what connection this man had with the robbery at all. He was not found at the house at all.

What connected him with the crime was that, first of all, the two men who elected to give evidence both said that he was one of the party that went to the house and further said that he was the instigator of the whole affair. He would also tell them that while the accused appeared to live in Hongkong the other two men came from Canton. They were apparently never do well and appeared to have taken to robbery as soon as they got here.

A Curious Statement.

The further thing which connected the accused man with the crime was that one of the women identified him from a number of men at the Police Station and, again, when the detectives went to the house where he lived they found some of the stolen articles there, while he actually was wearing a ring with a black stone, part of the stolen property when he was arrested. Another witness would be called to say that he returned to the house early in the morning after the robbery and second further piece of evidence would be the statement that he had made at the Police Station. That statement was rather a curious one. He said, "On Feb. 10, Chan Li Chun, (that is one of the women in the house) went to my place, and I then went with her to the entrance to her place. I did not go upstairs. I went to Pak Tee Lane to smoke opium." That was important because it put him that day at the place where the robbery was committed.

BOOK REVIEW.

A Guide for the Young Mother.

The Young Mother; a practical guide for the mother in the care of herself, both before and after the baby is born. Edited by J. Bernard Dawson M. D. Lond. F.R.C.S. Eng. 2/6 net.—Ewart, Seymour & Co. Ltd.

This book appears to be a judicious combination of medical advice and business advertisement. In a preface the author states that the book is intended more as a guide by which the young mother may be directed into the paths of health, and he states his intention to be that of making the book as nearly in accord with modern scientific medicine as the use of untechnical language permits him. We think, with certain reservations, that the author has succeeded in his intention. There are excellent chapters on the care of health during pregnancy, the preparations for childbirth, convalescence after labour, &c, which are preceded by an introductory chapter containing some useful advice to the young mother, and also to the old mother as to the age at which it is desirable her daughter should marry. The various signs of pregnancy are given in the succeeding chapter, and the connection between pregnancy and menstruation is fully explained in simple language. Chapter III is devoted to the disorders of pregnancy; we seriously question the wisdom of introducing some of the disorders mentioned in this chapter into a book of this nature. The author truly states that the list is a formidable one, and is apt to alarm the young wife unduly; for this very reason we think that many of the disorders mentioned would have been better omitted. By way of apology it is stated that the majority of the disorders are in no way serious, and that they do not endanger life; so far we agree with the author, but we do not consider it necessary to detail the more serious disorders, for the reason that any competent medical attendant will note their recurrence, and for the more important reason that the mention of the possibility of their occurrence is liable to deter the prospective mother from incurring such risks by indulging again in pregnancy. We once read a most excellent work of this nature which was entirely marred by a final graphic account of the unfortunate illness of Queen Charlotte! The author in another part of the book very wisely deprecates the voluble indulgence of nurses in the details of wonderful cases, and horrible incidents; we trust it will not be considered presumptuous on our part to suggest that it is unwise for authors to indulge in a similar manner, when writing books for young and presumably inexperienced mothers, or protective mothers. In the latter half of pregnancy it is suggested that the nipples should be prepared for nursing by bathing them with an alcoholic solution of boracic acid. As being directly contrary to the indications of nature we must strongly condemn such a practice; nature provides the nipples with an oily secretion which alcohol in any form will dissolve and remove; we consider it better practice to imitate nature in this respect by applying if necessary a boracic acid or bismuth ointment made up with animal fat such as lanolin. A small teaspoonful of cream should be added to the mixture suggested for artificial feeding, and it should be stated that in some babies the use of barley water as a diluent is attended by an undue amount of flatulence. With these reservations we can heartily commend the book.

THIRTEEN YEARS SERVICE.

Crown Sergeant Lee to Retire on a Pension

The Hongkong Police Force, we are informed, is about to lose one of its most valued members, by the retirement, on pension, of Crown Sergeant James Lee, who is being invalided home. Sergeant Lee left the Royal Marine Artillery on the 3rd February 1900, with a corporal's discharge, and joined the Hongkong Police Force. On the April, 1902, he was made Lance Sergeant, and Crown Sergeant on 1st June, 1907.

During his thirteen years service he has done consistently good work. For eleven years he has been a member of the Fire Brigade, and for about seven years was the engineer. At the commencement of last year, when the fire that devastated several hundreds of homes broke out in the neighbourhood of Taku Lane, Sergeant Lee nearly lost his life. His narrow escape was reported in the "Telegraph" at the time.

During the tramway boycott he was injured in one of the throwing moles. For some time past Sergeant Lee has not been enjoying good health, and it has now been decided that it would be better for him to go home. He proposes to leave the Colony about 4th May.

BOXING.

To-morrow's Contests at the City Hall.

The candidates for honours at the boxing tournament which is to be held at the City Hall, to-morrow night, under the auspices of Mr. Hall, are all in good trim, we are informed. This being so there should be some hot work with the gloves when the contestants are told to go. Box and Cook are, according to the careful arrangements made by the promoter, to weigh in at the V.R.O., at noon to-morrow, and in case either of the men fails to come down to that, he must forfeit $25. Any local enthusiast who would like to see the men weigh in, can do so by applying to Mr. Hall, at the V.R.O. Mr. Hall has arranged with Mee Chung to take a flash-light photo of the men when they enter the ring. Box is sanguine of the result, but, by the way, Cook is also convinced that the referee will hold up his hands. The fact that both men are full of confidence foretells, or rather should foretell, a good battle.

The bookings at Montrie's prove that many are anxious to witness the combats, and, between a good programme, good fighting and a good house, the event should prove a success.

Cantonese in a Faction Fight.

There was a serious faction fight at Samarang on March 27, says a telegram to the Java "Bode," March 28, between Javanese—members of a society called the Sarikat Islam—and Cantonese. There had been ill-feeling for some time; the Cantonese appear to have thrown pork into one of the mosques. One Chinaman was killed and two were badly wounded in the affray. A section of the military was called out to support the police in restoring order.

ITALIAN CONVENT.

THE Superiress of the Italian Convent begs to renew her appeal to the ladies and gentlemen of Hongkong for the usual gifts of cast off garments and worn out clothes to the Convent. Of late, there has been an appreciable falling-off in the periodical collections of old and second-hand materials received at the Convent. The Superiress feels confident that she has but to urge the pressing and daily increasing needs of the Convent in its provision for the poor, to receive benevolent responses from local residents.

The change of season calls for change of garments for the orphan children. If residents will kindly realize the great help they can render by sending such of their dress materials as are no longer any use to them, the little children will be suitably provided with clothes they are so much in need of.

LOG BOOK.

The Lisicum.

A further accident to the salvage operations of the U.S. transport Lisicum, at Shanghai has again delayed the raising of the vessel, a leak having been discovered in the lower end of the cofferdam which has necessitated the driving of more piles before the water can be pumped out.—"Shipping and Engineering."

Bought Back from the N.D.L. The Norddeutscher Lloyd steamer Phra Nang, 1,603 tons, which was purchased when the Scottish Oriental fleet changed hands, has once more come under the British flag. She was built by the Fairfield Company in 1890 with dimension 270.4ft. by 37ft. by 21.8ft.

H.A.L.'s New Purchase. The Hamburg-Amerika Linie has purchased from Messrs. Brocklebank & Co. of Liverpool, their twin-screw steamer Mandasor, 8,121 tons, formerly the Irak which was built by Messrs. Workman, Clark & Co. Belfast in 1902 for the Irak S.N. Co. with dimensions, 501ft. by 59.3ft. by 33ft.

Fire on the Minnesota. A fire occurred on board the Northern steamship Minnesota while lying in Yokohama harbour on March 11, a quantity of sulphur which had just been shipped becoming ignited in the tween decks. The fire was soon extinguished and the damaged sulphur discharged, the vessel sustaining no damage.

The s.s. Brodstone's Mishap. While passing through the Suez Canal on her way home from Shanghai on March 1, the steamer Brodstone struck the canal bank a sliding blow with her starboard bow. A survey was held on the vessel's arrival at Port Said, but as she was found to have sustained no damage, she proceeded on the same day.

Royal Mail Liner Ashore. A telegram from Tangier, dated April 1, says that the Royal Mail liner Agadir is ashore south of Mazagan. She carried 55 passengers, chiefly tourists, who have been landed. French warships have gone to her assistance. The vessel is on a rocky bottom two hundred yards from the shore. It is hoped to rescue her with hawsers and boats at low tide.

The Yawata Maru. The Yawata Maru's next voyage in the Nippon Yusen Kaisha's Australian service will be her last, says "Shipping and Engineering." She will be temporarily replaced by the Inaba Maru, now running to Seattle, and in November next the Tango Maru will be placed in the service, which will then be maintained by the Nikko Maru, Kuman Maru, and Tango Maru.

The Selandia. During his recent lecture on the gas engine, Professor Bertram Hopkinson pointed out that the "Selandia," a Diesel-engine vessel, developed her 2,500 h.p. in 16 cylinders. At the same rate a 30,000 h.p. Dreadnought would require some 200 cylinders of the same size. No engineer would care to be responsible for the installation and working of so many units. Hence, until large gas engines could be constructed, the universal adoption of such motors for marine propulsion would remain a dream. Professor Hopkinson also remarked that steam turbines, on the other hand, were now being constructed in units of 40,000 h.p.

A Collision. A collision occurred in the river at Shanghai on April 9 when the Norwegian steamer Chingtu ran into the Japanese steamer Tachi Maru which was moored at the N.Y.K. wharf. While coming round the Garden Bend the Chingtu got out of control and, taking broad sheer to port, struck the bow of the Tachi Maru, the impact carrying away her wires and forcing her down on the stern of the Omi Maru which was lying at the next berth. The rails and stanchions of the Tachi Maru were torn away and some of the bow plates damaged. The damage to the Chingtu did not appear serious, and she was enabled to proceed.—"Shipping and Engineering."

COMMERCIAL.

London Rubber Specials.

(From the "Straits Times" Correspondent.)

London, April 9.—It has been suggested that the plantation companies in combination should hold at the disposal of certain manufacturers at the price of half-a-crown per lb., up to 10 per cent. of all outputs, the produce to be used for the development of entirely new industries. Final dividends are declared as follows:—Damansara 32½ per cent., Bikam 12 per cent.

London, April 10.—The following additional dividends are declared:—Kopong 30 per cent.; Highlands 17½ per cent.; North Hummock 10 per cent. A large sale is expected on Tuesday. The market is weak on an active bear campaign.

Patenting Rubber Estates.

The report of the Patenting Rubber Estates Syndicate, Ltd., for the year 1912, submitted to the meeting on the 18th ult., stated that the rubber crop harvested for the year amounted to 429,547 lbs., against an estimate of 390,000 lbs. and a yield in 1911 of 333,044 lbs. The average gross price realised was 4½ 5/8 per lb. The cost of production, f.o.b. Port Swettenham, works out at 982½ per lb. against 11,561 per lb. for the preceding year. After adding directors' fees, office expenses in London, bonus to staff on estate, depreciation, insurance, landing and all sale charges, the total cost of production amounts to 14 5/16 per lb., which compares favourably with the 1911 figure of 15 7/16 per lb. The manager estimates the crop for 1913 at 470,000 lbs., 181 acres of new clearings were planted with Hevea during the year, bringing the cultivated area up to 1,648 acres. During the current year it is intended to plant up a further 75 acres. The net profit for the year amounts to £68,101, to which must be added the amount brought forward of £2,512, making together £70,613. Deducting the interim dividends paid as follows:—50 per cent., £11,250; 50 per cent., £11,250; January, 1913, 75 per cent., £18,875; and the directors now recommend a final dividend of 100 per cent., £22,500; adding to reserve £3,500, leaving to be carried forward £7,263.

Shanghai Cotton Market. Mr. A. B. Rosenfeld's Cotton Market Report, for the week ending 10th April, is as follows:—China Cotton:—During the past week the cotton market has been uneventful but with a rather firm undertone, in a general way, and a further gradual stiffening of quotation until an advance of some four points from the recent low level had been attained. The prime cause of the present situation is the stubbornness on the part of the Farmers, who absolutely refuse to part with their cotton under the present prevailing prices; in consequence of which, up country spinning is practically at a standstill until it becomes better demonstrated whether the present quotations are to prove cheap or dear in the long run. Receipts from Tangchow and vicinities are absolutely nil, whilst stocks of this particular staple in our local warehouses are estimated to be between 60 and 70,000 Bales. The end of this month and the first few days of the next, with the planting season nearer maturity and the usual estimates of Mill stocks, exports, consumption and surplus—enabling a fresh start to be made in calculating the outlook for the near future, will probably see a renewal of active operations; meanwhile the market will continue to be ruled to a great extent on development as to the holding policy of the Farmers. From past experience they have shown that their financial position is all that is to be desired and that they can also control the price of cotton to a great extent, so it will not do to be too sceptical as to their power this season. The outlook for the immediate future therefore seems to be for narrow markets, influenced from day to day by the weather map, and I can hardly see my way to a firm market for some time to come. Tone of the market, Steady, but Quiet.

GUNBOAT SMITH'S VICTORY.

Why Bombardier Wells Collapsed.

The following account, from "Boxing," of Gunboat Smith's startling victory over Bombardier Wells on Friday, March 14, at New York, will be read with interest:

There was a tremendous gathering at Madison Square Garden on Friday, March 14, when the English champion, Bombardier Wells, entered the ring to show us how much he had improved physically. The man selected to try him out, Gunboat Smith, though not hitherto regarded as being among the first flight of White Hopes, has yet proved himself to be an exceedingly awkward nut to crack. He has climbed slowly but steadily to a most respectable position through a series of 40 contests, no less than 30 of which he has gained by the k.o. route. Gunboat hasn't been given any vast amount of Press boosting, but he has put more men to sleep at short notice (in one or two rounds) than almost any heavy-weight who has ever been in the business. He is as game and as strong as they are made, and has a wallop in either hand which isn't far short of being a battering-ram in its effects.

Someone ought to have put the Bombardier wise to this, but if anyone did come along with the straight dope it must have got mislaid on the way. For Wells just walked up to his sudden and smashing defeat as though he wasn't expecting even a gentle pat of any description.

That first round was his undoing. The English champion won it from going to ground, and made Gunboat look like one of the veriest novices who ever got kided into fancying himself a boxer.

Wells found Smith's face with a swift left drive almost as soon as Gunboat came face to face with him. Smith tried a rush, but the Bombardier side-stepped with the utmost ease, and, walking or dancing around the lanky Westerner, proceeded to jab and jolt his face as fast as the beat of a watch, almost. Smith swung round all sorts of ways. He tried persistently to leave some terrific swings over with either right or left hand, but Wells either dodged or blocked these, and now and again varied his persistent face pecking with a sharp body drive. Gunboat was all at sea, and appeared unable to make either head or tail of the situation. He was swinging like a gate in a gale, and even when he absolutely flung himself on top of Wells the Briton blocked him neatly and checkmated all his efforts. Smith only landed a couple of punches in the entire round, and neither of these hurt to any extent. Gunboat meant one of them to hurt, but Wells broke most of its force before it arrived, while the second delivery was more of a dab than a punch. On the other hand, all Wells' punches were carrying plenty of steam, and Smith was both bruised and bleeding when he returned to his corner. The Bombardier had exploited a wide variety of punches, and had shown himself to be Gunboat's master at every point of the game as far as that round had gone.

It looked dollars to dough-nuts on Wells when the gong sounded, and the Bombardier beamed happily on all around. His seconds looked as jubilant as if the world's championship was already in their grasp, and I don't suppose there were twenty people present who expected to see Smith last longer than another round or two at most.

It was perfectly plain that Wells intended to settle all the trouble right out of hand. He jumped up from his seat at the gong and advanced to meet Gunboat, looking as though he was the greatest thing the sun had yet beamed upon. It was a fatal over-confidence, because although he let out at Smith as the latter came tearing in on a do-or-die mission, Smith ducked under the jab, which just brushed his hair, and smashed a terrific right to the body. Wells was taken badly by surprise. He wasn't on his toes, made no attempt to uppercut or side-step, and so paid the penalty. That punch practically won the contest, for Wells doubled up as the blow landed, and was plainly badly hurt. He managed to sway away, but it was more like a reel away than an intentional side-step, and he was too badly hurt to get out of Smith's next rush, which caught him on the totter. Smith saw that he had snatched a victory out of the fire, and he isn't the man to miss chances. A vicious left hook to the head got home, and the Bombardier's head turned round, only to be met by a hard right swing which connected with the jaw.

The Bombardier went down in a heap, looking out to the world. He was clearly half dazed, for he rose at the count of 5, but couldn't lift his arms. Smith, who had been waved back by the referee, charged in again, sending in a shower of blows which caught Wells on the head, face, and body. Gunboat was almost beside himself with excitement, and was hitting wildly, but Wells wasn't steady enough to get out of the way, and took at least half a dozen punches before a terrific right swing came down on the back of his neck and brought him forward on to his face.

The Bombardier was all out, but made a terrific effort, and once more managed to struggle up. Nine seconds had gone, and his case was hopeless. He stood swaying like a tree in a wind, and Gunboat had only to measure him and put in a right to the jaw to send his big opponent down like a log. This time it was the finisher. Wells was counted out, and had to be carried to his corner by his seconds, fully ten minutes elapsing before he could regain consciousness. It was the most sensational and unexpected ending which could be imagined.

Wells had the fight in hand easily, and has only himself to blame for his defeat, which was entirely due to over-confidence.

The Wrong Name.

In our issue of yesterday in discussing the arrival of new motor cars, we referred inadvertently to Mr. Lauritsen of the Coronation Garage. This should have been the Dragon Cycle Company.

"All in a Day."

Sentenced to one day's imprisonment in default of paying proclial rates, a widow turned up at the Greenwich Police Court after the business was over. The magistrate sent for her and said: "You may go now. In that one moment of anguish a thousand years have passed."
